POWER DEMAND GROWTH

Coal units at 62% PLF to take gencos' Ebidta at 5-year high

INDRONIL ROYCHOWDHURY
Kolkata, September 6

INDIA'S COAL-FIRED PLANTS are expected to operate at 62% plant load factor (PLF) steadily for the whole of the fiscal, lead-companies this fiscal.

According to a power ministry report, the PLF is expected

TRENDS IN ENERGY

- PLF is expected to rise from an average 58-60% to a steady 62%
- This would match the annualised power demand growth of 3.4% for the last five years
- Demand growth has outpaced thermal capacity addition
- However, the existing capacities can match the demand growth if run at a higher PLF of the total installed capacity in the last five years whereas the demand growth of power has been at an annualised 3.4%.

7,000 mw of capacity addition would translate to a ty growth of 3.5%, at a 6% power demand

7.3% GDP growth.

aces the growth in capacity addition, private sector generation aggregating 00 MW would be benefitting the most with merchant power still remaining upbeat, Crisil report said, adding there would be an improvement in the credit risk profile such merchant power plants, which might aid in thermal capacity addition by private sector players.

Private players in the last five years have been averse to adding coal-based capacities as the Centre had planned to meet 50% of the demand from renewables.

But, renewable addition third of the demand and coal-based gencos need to fill in the gap, the ministry official said.

Power demand has been growing at 15-20% month-on-month in energy terms since August-September last year onwards, the power ministry reported.

According to the Central Electricity Authority (CEA), Coal India (CIL) has been supplying coal to the thermal power stations at 85% PLF and improved supplies from CIL helped the stock stabilising at power plants.

Closing stock for the month of August is at six-year high, barring 2020 when pandemic fuelled slowdown saw the CIL's supplies to power sector at 243.3 million tonne (mt) achieved 108% of annual action plan (AAP) target of 225.4 mt, progressive till August of financial year 2022-23.

Supplies overshot the target by nearly 18 mt.

Therefore, coal doesn't seem to be a problem this fiscal for generation in higher PLF.

Surplus rains in Karnataka hike tomato prices by 66%

IMD predicts more rains over south interior of state

SANDIP DAS
New Delhi, September 6

SURPLUS RAINS IN the key tomato-growing regions of Karnataka, one of the key producers the arrivals in the mandis, thus pushing up prices.

The benchmark mandi pricquintal on Tuesday from a week ago. Traders say prices are expected to rise further in the coming weeks because of the adverse impact of rains on the crop yield.

The current mandi prices of tomatoes are still 150% more than a year ago. In June, mandi price was prevailing at more than ₹3,000 a quintal, which pushed retail prices to ₹90/100 a kg. In the last couple of days, ₹50 a kg from ₹40 a kg prevailing a fortnight back.

South interior Karnataka consisting of Kolar, Tumakuru, Chikkaballapura, Ramanagara, Mandya and Mysuru districts, which are key vegetable-growing regions have received 69% more rainfall than the normal benchmark — long period average — in this monsoon season.

With the India Meteorologi-

day predicting intense rainfall activities over coastal and south interior Karnataka in the next two days, tomato and other vegetable prices are expected to rise because of loss of crops. "Waterlogging in fields has delayed the harvest of tomato as well as productivity has been hit," a trader at Kolar, Karnataka, told FE.

Meanwhile, mandi prices of onion at Lasalgaon (Maharashtra) have declined by more than 20% to ₹1,220 a quintal from a year ago because of bumper rabi output. Traders said that the production of stored rabi onion around 60% in the total output, has been around 20% more than the last year in Maharash-

At Azadpur, Asia's biggest market for fruits and vegetables, onion prices are ruling around ₹15/ a kg while modal retails prices as per the ministry of consumer affairs was ₹25/a kg.

"Prices were ruling around ₹30 a kg last year, because of lower production," Giriraj Chauhan, a trader or commission agent at the Azadpur mandi, said. Onion production in the

Govt to make seat belt alarm system must for auto firms: Gadkari

Road transport & highways

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
New Delhi, September 6

THE GOVERNMENT IS planning to make it mandatory for automakers to introduce a seat belt alarm system for rear seats also, Union road transport and highways minister Nitin Gadkari said on Tuesday.

Presently, it is mandatory for all vehicle manufacturers to for front-seat passengers.

"Because of the death of Cyrus Mistry in a car accident, we have taken a decision that there will be a seat belt beep system for the rear seats also in vehicles," he said while addressing a Business Standard programme to celebrate India@75.

Former Tata Sons chairman Cyrus Mistry was killed in a road accident on Sunday after his car hit a divider in Maharashtra's Palghar district.

Although not wearing a seat belt by passengers sitting in the rear seats attracts a fine of ₹1,000 under Rule 138 (3) of the Central Motor Vehicle Rules (CMVR), most people are either unaware of this mandatory rule or just ignore them.

Even traffic policemen seldom fine passengers sitting on rear seats for not wearing seat belts. As per a recent road ministry report, the number of persons killed and injured due to not wearing a seat belt during 2020 stood at 15,146 and 39,102, respectively.

matching the annualised power demand growth of 3.4% for the last five years.

While demand growth has outpaced thermal capacity addition, the existing capacities can match the demand growth if run at a higher PLF. High merchant power prices have prompted discoms to enter into term contracts with the gencos in the past 12

The trend is further enhanced with the new central rule barring discoms to buy spot power from the exchanges if bills to the gencos are unpaid.

This will likely push new capacity addition pegged at 7,000 megawatt (mw) this fiscal, a ministry official said.

According to a Crisil Rating report, the annual coal-based capacity addition has been at

Cotton prices start downward trend

NAYAN DAVE
Ahmedabad, September 6

WITH EARLY SOWN cotton-selling commencing in mandis in cotton-growing states including Gujarat, prices of the fibre in the domestic market have slipped below ₹90,000 per candy (356 kg per candy) from over ₹1 lakh per candy in a span of a fortnight.

Market experts are expecting a further decline in cotton prices in anticipation of higher production of the crop as well as low demand from the textile industry. Over the past 3-4 days cotton was sold in the range of ₹80,000 to ₹85000 per candy.

"At present, crop condition across cotton-growing states is excellent and if everything goes well, we are expecting more than 350,00,000 bales (170 kg per bale) production in the upcoming 2022-23 season as against 315,00,000 bales in the current season. If October does not witness severe rains, production may further increase by 25,00,000 bales," said Atul Ganatra, president of Cotton Association of India (CAI).

Cotton prices are going down internationally, said Ganatra, adding that the arrival of fresh cotton would increase by the beginning of October and there would be a gradual downtrend in the domestic cotton market, too. Till the beginning of September, cotton sowing in India completed 12.6 million hectare against previous year's 11.7 million hectare.

Avdhesh Sejpal, president of All India Cotton, Cotton Seeds and Cotton Cake Brokers Association, claimed prices of cotton will not go below ₹70,000 per candy in the Indian market even after peak arrival of fresh cotton. Cotton crop in neighbouring Pakistan was damaged due to flood and in the case of the US and China, there would be lower production in wake of unfavourable weather conditions, said Sejpal, adding that due to these reasons, there would be huge export demand of cotton in the next 2-3 months.

SC DIRECTION

Centre to seek info from states on cases filed under scrapped IT Act

FE BUREAU
New Delhi, September 6

THE SUPREME COURT on Tuesday directed the Centre to get details from the state governments where cases are still being filed under the scrapped Section 66A of the Information Technology Act.

The apex court did so after expressing serious concern that despite the provision — which gives law enforcement agencies powers to arrest for any offensive social media posts — being declared unconstitutional by it way back in 2015, various state governments are still filing cases

Chief Justice UU Lalit stated in its order.

It also noted that most states had submitted that their governments have "scrupulously followed" the Shreya Singhal judgement, but "still it appears that the provision is being invoked".

Declaring Section 66A as unconstitutional in the Shreya Singhal case in 2015, the SC had described it as "vague". It had held that the Section is being struck down in its entirety as it is violative of Article 19(1)(a) (freedom of speech) and not saved under Article 19(2) (reasonable restrictions).
