VIRGINIA PROTEST

Defiant Trump again bla

AP ■ NEW YORK

President Donald Trump defiantly blamed "both sides" for the violence between white supremacists and counter-demonstrators in Virginia, seeking to rebuff the widespread criticism of his handling of the emotionally-charged protests while showing sympathy for the fringe group's efforts to preserve Confederate monuments.

In doing so, Trump used the bullhorn of the presidency to give voice to the grievances of white nationalists, and aired some of his own. His remarks on Tuesday amounted to a rejection of the Republicans, business leaders and White House advisers who earlier this week had pushed the president to more forcefully and specifically condemn the KKK members, neo-Nazis and white supremacists who took to the streets of Charlottesville.

The angry exchange with reporters at his skyscraper hotel in New York City laid bare a reality of the Trump presidency: Trump cannot be managed by others or steered away from damaging political land mines. His top aides were stunned by his comments, with some — including new chief of staff John Kelly — standing by helplessly as the president escalated his rhetoric. Standing in the lobby of Trump Tower, Trump acknowledged that there were "some very bad people" among those who gathered to protest Saturday. But he added, "You also had people that were very fine people, on both sides."

In his remarks, Trump condemned bigoted ideology and called James Alex Fields Jr, who drove his car into a crowd of counter-protester killing a 32-year-old woman, "a disgrace to himself, his family and his country." "So, this week it's Robert E Lee," he said. "I noticed that Stonewall Jackson's coming down. I wonder, is it George Washington next week and is it Thomas Jefferson the week after? You really do have to ask yourself, where does it stop?"

He continued: "You're changing history. You're changing culture."

Women visit a memorial in Charlottesville AP

Woman killed at rally mourned

Charlottesville: Mourners gathered in Charlottesville, Virginia, on Wednesday to honor the woman who was killed when a car rammed into a crowd of people protesting a white nationalist rally that descended into violence last weekend. A memorial service for Heather Heyer is scheduled Wednesday at a downtown Charlottesville theater. Attendees were asked to wear purple, Heyer's favorite colour, in her memory.

German politician slams Trump's comments

Berlin: A leading German politician has branded U.S. President Donald Trump's comments on the events surrounding a white nationalist rally in Charlottesville, Virginia as "highly dangerous." Martin Schulz, who is Chancellor Angela Merkel's main challenger in next month's election, said Germany has to "do everything to avoid things here going the way they are in America."

FAR-RIGHT SHOULD ALWAYS BE CONDEMNED, SAYS MAY

PTI N LONDON

In a clear message to US President Donald Trump, British Prime Minister Theresa May said on Wednesday that it was important for those in positions of responsibility to condemn far-right views and people who propound fascist views should not be equated with those who oppose them.

The US President reverted on Tuesday to his initial position that both left and right-wing extremists turned violent during a weekend rally by white nationalists in Charlottesville, Virginia. May, when asked about the Charlottesville violence while attending a ceremony in the coastal town of Portsmouth to mark the arrival of the aircraft carrier HMS Queen Elizabeth, said, "I see no equivalence between those who propound fascist views and those who oppose them."

"I think it is important for all those in positions of responsibility to condemn far-right views wherever we hear them," she British premier said.

Asked about Trump's response to the incidents, May said, "As I made clear at the weekend following the horrendous scenes that we saw in Charlottesville, I absolutely abhor the racism, the hatred and the violence that we have seen portrayed by these groups."
