SIKKA TOPS SALARY

At a time when the information technology (IT) sector is grappling with a tough business environment and headwinds related to Donald Trump's policies regarding the H1-B visa, the founders of Infosys have flagged concerns over transparency and corporate governance, besides questioning the compensation package of Vishal Sikka, its chief executive officer, and the severance package to former chief compliance officer David Kennedy. Appointed MD & CEO on August 1, 2014, Sikka took home ₹4.56 crore as salary in FY15, the data show. In 2015–16, Sikka as CEO took home ₹48.73 crore as salary (including bonus and incentives), which is the highest among peers. This is a 969% jump over his take home pay in the previous financial year. In comparison, N Chandrasekaran, TCS' former MD & CEO and Tata Sons' next chairman, drew ₹25.6 crore in FY16, including perks and variable pay, the data show. Here is a quick compilation by Puneet Wadhwa and Deepak Korgaonkar of how the salary payouts in the IT industry stack up:
