Meesho bets over 40% of IPO money on in-house Al infra

Bengaluru, December 1

E-COMMERCE PLATFORM MEESHO'S proprietary AI engine already drives 74.57% of all orders on its platform to power personalised recommendations, dynamic pricing, and automated cataloging. Now, the company is betting ₹1,870 crore — which forms 44% of its ₹5,421 crore IPO proceeds — towards owning the infrastructure to run this AI, which it thinks will be cheaper than renting it from cloud giants like Amazon Web Services, Azure, or Google Cloud.

The investment reflects a critical inflection point: Meesho's AI has grown so large that the economics of relying on external cloud computing no longerworks. The platform's BharatMLStack AI engine processes 5.92 billion data points daily, and makes 6.4 trillion real-time predictions at peak, as of September 30, 2025, up 40% in just four months since filing its draft red herring prospectus (DRHP). Meanwhile, data storage jumped 34% to 55 petabytes during the same period. Server and software costs surged 60% to ₹437.2 crore in the six months ended September 2025, as per the STRATEGIC MOVE ■ The platform operates with an average order company's red herring prospectus. At this trajectory, continuing to rent infrastructure would mean spiralling costs.

"When deploying AI-based solutions at consumer scale, cloud infrastructure costs from providers like Amazon Web Services, Microsoft's Azure, and Google Cloud can quickly become unsustainable," said a Bangalore-based analyst tracking the sector. "When you're processing billions of data points daily and serving 200 millionplus users, the difference between AWS/Azure pricing and owned infrastructure can be hundreds of crores annually."

According to the firm's RHP, Meeshowill deploy ₹1,390 crore for cloud infrastructure and ₹480 crore for salaries of AI and machine learning teams at subsidiary Meesho Technologies.

Such optimisations become even more critical for Meesho as it operates at thinner margins as compared to other e-commerce players. The platform operates with an average order value of ₹274, roughly onethird of traditional e-commerce players at ₹830-1,000. At such levels, even minor inefficiencies in recommendations or logistics routing can destroy unit economics, analysts suggest.

The payoff for moving to inhouse infrastructure is visible with Valmo, Meesho's logistics aggregation platform. Valmo has scaled from handling just 1.83% of orders in FY23 to 61.06% by April-June 2025, processing nearly two-thirds of the platform's 1.26 billion orders. By routing orders across 13,683 small logistics partners, Valmo helps sellers save up to 12% on shipping costs per parcel. As more orders get processed through this routing mechanism, load on the AI engine will also increase, validating the need for internal infrastructure.

The strategic shift follows Meesho's contentious experiencewith third-party providers. AWS initiated arbitration proceedings against Meesho over ₹127 crore in alleged unpaid bills under a February 2022 contract, with Meesho filing a counterclaim of ₹86 crore citing service deficiencies. The company has since moved to Google Cloud, but the dispute underscores dependency risks.

Meesho bets over 40% of IPO money on in-house Al infra

ANEES HUSSAIN Bengaluru, December 1

E-COMMERCE PLATFORM

MEESHO'S proprietary AI engine already drives 74.57% of all orders on its platform to power personalised recommendations, dynamic pricing, and automated cataloging. Now, the company is betting ₹1,870 crore — which forms 44% of its ₹5,421 crore IPO proceeds — towards owning the infrastructure to run this AI, which it thinks will be cheaper than renting it from cloud giants like Amazon Web Services, Azure, or Google Cloud. The investment reflects a critical inflection point: Meesho's AI has grown so large that the economics of relying on external cloud computing no longerworks. The platform's BharatMLStack AI engine processes 5.92 billion data points daily, and makes 6.4 trillion real-time predictions at peak, as of September 30, 2025, up 40% in just four months since filing its draft red herring prospectus (DRHP). Meanwhile, data storage jumped 34% to 55 petabytes during the same period. Server and software costs surged 60% to ₹437.2 crore in the six months ended September 2025, as per the company's red herring prospectus. At this trajectory, continuing to rent infrastructure would mean spiralling costs.

"When deploying AI-based solutions at consumer scale, cloud infrastructure costs from providers like Amazon Web Services, Microsoft's Azure, and Google Cloud can quickly become unsustainable," said a Bangalore-based analyst tracking the sector. "When you're processing billions of data points daily and serving 200 millionplus users, the difference between AWS/Azure pricing and owned infrastructure can be hundreds of crores annually."

According to the firm's RHP,

for cloud infrastructure and ₹480 crore for salaries of AI and machine learning teams at subsidiary Meesho Technologies. Such optimisations become even more critical for Meesho as it operates at thinner margins as compared to other e-commerce players. The platform

operates with an average order value of ₹274, roughly onethird of traditional e-commerce players at ₹830-1,000. At such levels, even minor inefficiencies in recommendations or logistics routing can destroy unit economics, analysts suggest. The payoff for moving to inhouse infrastructure is visible with Valmo, Meesho's logistics aggregation platform. Valmo has scaled from handling just 1.83% of orders in FY23 to 61.06% by April-June 2025, processing nearly two-thirds of the platform's 1.26 billion orders. By routing orders across 13,683 small logistics partners, Valmo helps sellers save up to 12% on shipping costs per parcel. As more orders get processed through this routing mechanism, load on the AI engine will also increase, validating the need for internal infrastructure.

The strategic shift follows Meesho's contentious experience with third-party providers. AWS initiated arbitration proceedings against Meesho over ₹127 crore in alleged unpaid bills under a February 2022 contract, with Meesho filing a counterclaim of ₹86 crore citing ser vice deficiencies. The company has since moved to Google Cloud, but the dispute underscores dependency risks.

Meesho bets over 40% of IPO money on in-house Al infra

ANEES HUSSAIN Bengaluru, December 1

E-COMMERCE PLATFORM MEESHO'S proprietary AI engine already drives 74.57% of all orders on its platform to power personalised recommendations, dynamic pricing, and automated cataloging. Now, the company is betting ₹1,870 crore — which forms 44% of its ₹5,421 crore IPO proceeds — towards owning the infrastructure to run this AI. which it thinks will be cheaper than renting it from cloud giants like Amazon Web Services, Azure, or Google Cloud. The investment reflects a critical inflection point: Meesho's AI has grown so large that the economics of relying on external cloud computing no longerworks. The platform's BharatMLStack AI engine processes 5.92 billion data points daily, and makes 6.4 trillion real-time predictions at peak, as of September 30, 2025, up 40% in just four months since filing its draft red herring prospectus (DRHP). Meanwhile, data storage jumped 34% to 55 petabytes during the same period. Server and software costs surged 60% to ₹437.2 crore in the six months ended September 2025, as per the STRATEGIC MOVE platform operates with an average order value of Meesho will ₹274 deploy ₹1,390 crore for cloud infra & ■ Valmo has scaled from company's red herring prospectus. At this trajectory, continuing to rent infrastructure would mean spiralling costs.

"When deploying AI-based solutions at consumer scale, cloud infrastructure costs from providers like Amazon Web Services, Microsoft's Azure, and Google Cloud can quickly become unsustainable," said a Bangalore-based analyst tracking the sector. "When you're processing billions of data points daily and serving 200 millionplus users, the difference between AWS/Azure pricing and owned infrastructure can be hundreds of crores annually." According to the firm's RHP, for cloud infrastructure and ₹480 crore for salaries of AI and machine learning teams at subsidiary Meesho Technologies. Such optimisations become even more critical for Meesho as it operates at thinner margins as compared to other e-commerce players. The platform operates with an average order value of ₹274, roughly onethird of traditional e-commerce players at ₹830-1,000. At such levels, even minor in efficiencies in recommendations or logistics routing can destroy unit economics, analysts suggest. The payoff for moving to inhouse infrastructure is visible with Valmo, Meesho's logistics aggregation platform. Valmo has scaled from handling just 1.83% of orders in FY23 to 61.06% by April-June 2025, processing nearly two-thirds of the platform's 1.26 billion orders. By routing orders across 13,683 small logistics partners, Valmo helps sellers save up to 12% on shipping costs per parcel. As more orders get processed through this routing mechanism, load on the AI engine will also increase, validating the need for internal infrastructure.

The strategic shift follows Meesho's contentious experience with third-party providers. AWS initiated arbitration proceedings against Meesho over ₹127 crore in alleged unpaid bills under a February 2022 contract, with Meesho filing a counterclaim of ₹86 crore citing service deficiencies. The company has since moved to Google Cloud, but the dispute underscores dependency risks.

SIM-binding to plug security gap: Govt

PEGGING CYBER-FRAUD losses at over ₹22,800 crore in 2024 alone, the government on Monday said its latest directions on mandatory, continuous SIM-device binding for use of messaging apps are "essential to plug a concrete security gap" that cybercriminals are exploiting to run large-scale, often cross-border, digital frauds.

The direction does not affect the cases where the SIM is present in the handset, and the user is on roaming, the Ministry of Communications

assured in a release.

"DoT's SIM-binding directions are essential to plug a concrete security gap that cybercriminals are exploiting to run large-scale, often cross-border, digital frauds. Accounts on instant messaging and calling apps continue to work even after the associated SIM is removed, deactivated or moved abroad, enabling anonymous scams, remote digital arrest frauds and government-impersonation calls using Indian numbers," the release said.

Telcos: Mandatory move for messaging apps a milestone and misuse,"COAI said.

INDUSTRY BODY COAL on Monday said Telecom Department's move mandating that messaging apps like WhatsApp will work only with an active SIM would bolster national security and pledged telecom operators' commitment to supporting seamless implementation of the latest directive. Such continuous linkage ensures complete accountability and traceability for any activity undertaken by the SIM card and its associated communication app, "closing long-persistent gaps that have enabled anonymity

"COAI welcomes and commends the Department of Telecommunications (DoT) for taking a landmark step towards bolstering national security and safeguarding our citizens, by mandating SIM-binding for devices for app-based communication services," SP Kochhar, director general of COAI, said. The comment from the apex

body comes after directions by government that would ensure app-based communication services are continuously linked to a user's active SIM card. —PTI

Meesho bets over 40% of IPO money on in-house Al infra

ANEES HUSSAIN Bengaluru, December 1

E-COMMERCE PLATFORM MEESHO'S proprietary AI engine already drives 74.57% of all orders on its platform to power personalised recommendations, dynamic pricing, and automated cataloging. Now, the company is betting ₹1,870 crore — which forms 44% of its ₹5,421 crore IPO proceeds — towards owning the infrastructure to run this AI, which it thinks will be cheaper than renting it from cloud giants like Amazon Web Services, Azure, or Google Cloud. The investment reflects a critical inflection point: Meesho's AI has grown so large that the economics of relying on external cloud computing no longerworks. The platform's BharatMLStack AI engine processes 5.92 billion data points daily, and makes 6.4 trillion real-time predictions at peak, as of September 30, 2025, up 40% in just four months since filing its draft red herring prospectus (DRHP). Meanwhile, data storage jumped 34% to 55 petabytes during the same period. Server and software costs surged 60% to ₹437.2 crore in the six months ended September 2025, as per the

STRATEGIC MOVE

VALMO

₹480 crore for salaries of Al teams ■ It is piloting commercialisation ? of its Al capabilities to external businesses

for cloud infra &

company's red herring prospectus. At this trajectory, continuing to rent infrastructure would mean spiralling costs. "When deploying AI-based solutions at consumer scale, cloud infrastructure costs from providers like Amazon Web Services, Microsoft's Azure, and Google Cloud can quickly become unsustainable," said a Bangalore-based analyst tracking the sector. "When you're processing billions of data points daily and serving 200 millionplus users, the difference between AWS/Azure pricing and owned infrastructure can be hundreds of crores annually." According to the firm's RHP, for cloud infrastructure and ₹480 crore for salaries of AI and machine learning teams at subsidiary Meesho Technologies. Such optimisations become

even more critical for Meesho as it operates at thinner margins as compared to other e-commerce players. The platform

operates with an average order value of ₹274, roughly onethird of traditional e-commerce players at ₹830-1,000. At such levels, even minor inefficiencies in recommendations or logistics routing can destroy unit

economics, analysts suggest. The payoff for moving to inhouse infrastructure is visible with Valmo, Meesho's logistics aggregation platform. Valmo has scaled from handling just 1.83% of orders in FY23 to 61.06% by April-June 2025, processing nearly two-thirds of the platform's 1.26 billion orders. By routing orders across 13,683 small logistics partners, Valmo helps sellers save up to 12% on shipping costs per parcel. As more orders get processed through this routing mechanism, load on the AI engine will also increase, validating the need for internal infrastructure.

The strategic shift follows Meesho's contentious experience with third-party providers. AWS initiated arbitration proceedings against Meesho over ₹127 crore in alleged unpaid bills under a February 2022 contract, with Meesho filing a counterclaim of ₹86 crore citing ser vice deficiencies. The company has since moved to Google Cloud, but the dispute underscores dependency risks.

SIM-binding to plug security gap: Govt

PEGGING CYBER-FRAUD losses at over ₹22,800 crore in 2024 alone, the government on Monday said its latest directions on mandatory, continuous SIM-device binding for use of messaging apps are "essential to plug a concrete security gap"

that cybercriminals are exploiting to run large-scale, often cross-border, digital frauds. The direction does not affect the cases where the SIM is present in the handset, and the user is on roaming, the Ministry of Communications

assured in a release.

"DoT's SIM-binding direcgovernment-impersonation

tions are essential to plug a concrete security gap that cybercriminals are exploiting to run large-scale, often cross-border, digital frauds. Accounts on instant messaging and calling apps continue to work even after the associated SIM is removed, deactivated or moved abroad, enabling anonymous scams, remote digital arrest frauds and calls using Indian numbers,"the release said.

Meesho bets over 40% of IPO money on in-house Al infra

ANEES HUSSAIN Bengaluru, December 1

E-COMMERCE PLATFORM MEESHO'S proprietary AI engine already drives 74.57% of all orders on its platform to power personalised recommendations, dynamic pricing, and automated cataloging. Now, the company is betting ₹1,870 crore — which forms 44% of its ₹5,421 crore IPO proceeds — towards owning the infrastructure to run this AI, which it thinks will be cheaper than renting it from cloud giants like Amazon Web Services, Azure, or Google Cloud.

The investment reflects a critical inflection point: Meesho's AI has grown so large that the economics of relying on external cloud computing no longerworks. The platform's BharatMLStack AI engine processes 5.92 billion data points daily, and makes 6.4 trillion real-time predictions at peak, as of September 30, 2025, up 40% in just four months since filing its draft red herring prospectus (DRHP). Meanwhile, data storage jumped 34% to 55 petabytes during the same period. Server and software costs surged 60% to ₹437.2 crore in the six months ended September 2025, as per the

STRATEGIC MOVE ■ The platform operates! with an average order value of Meesho will ₹274 deploy ₹1,390 crore for cloud infra & ■ Valmo has scaled from alleged unpaid bills company's red herring prospectus. At this trajectory, continuing to rent infrastructure would mean spiralling costs. "When deploying AI-based solutions at consumer scale, cloud infrastructure costs from providers like Amazon Web Services, Microsoft's Azure, and Google Cloud can quickly become unsustainable," said a Bangalore-based analyst tracking the sector. "When you're processing billions of data points daily and serving 200 millionplus users, the difference between AWS/Azure pricing and owned infrastructure can be hundreds of crores annually."

According to the firm's RHP,

■ AWS initiated

over ₹127 cr in

for cloud infrastructure and ₹480 crore for salaries of AI and machine learning teams at subsidiary Meesho Technologies. Such optimisations become even more critical for Meesho as it operates at thinner margins as compared to other e-commerce players. The platform

operates with an average order value of ₹274, roughly onethird of traditional e-commerce players at ₹830-1,000. At such levels, even minor in efficiencies in recommendations or logistics routing can destroy unit

economics, analysts suggest. The payoff for moving to inhouse infrastructure is visible with Valmo, Meesho's logistics aggregation platform. Valmo has scaled from handling just 1.83% of orders in FY23 to 61.06% by April-June 2025, processing nearly two-thirds of the platform's 1.26 billion orders. By routing orders across 13,683 small logistics partners, Valmo helps sellers save up to 12% on shipping costs per parcel. As more orders get processed through this routing mechanism, load on the AI engine will also increase, validating the need for internal infrastructure.

The strategic shift follows Meesho's contentious experience with third-party providers. AWS initiated arbitration proceedings against Meesho over ₹127 crore in alleged unpaid bills under a February 2022 contract, with Meesho filing a counterclaim of ₹86 crore citing ser vice deficiencies. The company has since moved to Google Cloud, but the dispute underscores dependency risks.

Meesho bets over 40% of IPO money on in-house Al infra

ANEES HUSSAIN Bengaluru, December 1

E-COMMERCE PLATFORM

MEESHO'S proprietary AI engine already drives 74.57% of all orders on its platform to power personalised recommendations, dynamic pricing, and automated cataloging. Now, the company is betting ₹1,870 crore — which forms 44% of its ₹5,421 crore IPO

proceeds — towards owning the infrastructure to run this AI, which it thinks will be cheaper than renting it from cloud giants like Amazon Web Services, Azure, or Google Cloud. The investment reflects a critical inflection point:

Meesho's AI has grown so large that the economics of relying on external cloud computing no longerworks. The platform's BharatMLStack AI engine processes 5.92 billion data points daily, and makes 6.4 trillion real-time predictions at peak, as of September 30, 2025, up 40% in just four months since filing its draft red herring prospectus (DRHP). Meanwhile, data storage jumped 34% to 55 petabytes during the same period. Server and software costs surged 60% to ₹437.2 crore in the six months ended September 2025, as per the company's red herring prospectus. At this trajectory, continuing to rent infrastructure would mean spiralling costs.

"When deploying AI-based solutions at consumer scale, cloud infrastructure costs from providers like Amazon Web Services, Microsoft's Azure, and Google Cloud can quickly become unsustainable," said a Bangalore-based analyst tracking the sector. "When you're processing billions of data points daily and serving 200 millionplus users, the difference between AWS/Azure pricing and owned infrastructure can be hundreds of crores annually."

over ₹127 cr in

alleged unpaid bills

Meeshowill deploy ₹1,390 crore for cloud infrastructure and ₹480 crore for salaries of AI and machine learning teams at subsidiary Meesho Technologies. Such optimisations become

even more critical for Meesho as it operates at thinner margins as compared to other e-commerce players. The platform

operates with an average order value of ₹274, roughly onethird of traditional e-commerce players at ₹830-1,000. At such levels, even minor inefficiencies in recommendations or logistics routing can destroy unit economics, analysts suggest.

The payoff for moving to inhouse infrastructure is visible with Valmo, Meesho's logistics aggregation platform. Valmo has scaled from handling just 1.83% of orders in FY23 to 61.06% by April-June 2025, processing nearly two-thirds of the platform's 1.26 billion orders. By routing orders across 13,683 small logistics partners, Valmo helps sellers save up to 12% on shipping costs per parcel. As more orders get processed through this routing mechanism, load on the AI engine will also increase, validating the need for internal infrastructure.

The strategic shift follows Meesho's contentious experience with third-party providers. AWS initiated arbitration proceedings against Meesho over ₹127 crore in alleged unpaid bills under a February 2022 contract, with Meesho filing a counterclaim of ₹86 crore citing ser vice deficiencies. The company has since moved to Google Cloud, but the dispute underscores dependency risks.

SIM-binding to plug security gap: Govt

PEGGING CYBER-FRAUD losses at over ₹22,800 crore in 2024 alone, the government on Monday said its latest directions on mandatory, continuous SIM-device binding for use of messaging apps are "essential to plug a concrete security gap" that cybercriminals are exploit-

cross-border, digital frauds.

The direction does not affect the cases where the SIM is present in the handset, and the user is on roaming, the Ministry of Communications

assured in a release.

"DoT's SIM-binding directions are essential to plug a concrete security gap that cybercriminals are exploiting to run large-scale, often cross-border, digital frauds. Accounts on instant messaging and calling apps continue to work even after the associated SIM is removed, deactivated or moved abroad, enabling anonymous scams, remote digital arrest frauds and government-impersonation calls using Indian numbers,"the release said.

body comes after directions by government that would ensure app-based communication services are continuously linked to a user's active SIM card. —PTI

Meesho bets over 40% of IPO money on in-house Al infra

ANEES HUSSAIN Bengaluru, December 1

E-COMMERCE PLATFORM

MEESHO'S proprietary AI engine already drives 74.57% of all orders on its platform to power personalised recommendations, dynamic pricing, and automated cataloging. Now, the company is betting ₹1,870 crore — which forms 44% of its ₹5,421 crore IPO proceeds — towards owning the infrastructure to run this AI, which it thinks will be cheaper than renting it from cloud

giants like Amazon Web Services, Azure, or Google Cloud.

The investment reflects a critical inflection point: Meesho's AI has grown so large that the economics of relying on external cloud computing no longerworks. The platform's BharatMLStack AI engine processes 5.92 billion data points daily, and makes 6.4 trillion real-time predictions at peak, as of September 30, 2025, up 40% in just four months since filing its draft red herring prospectus (DRHP). Meanwhile, data storage jumped 34% to 55 petabytes during the same period. Server and software costs surged 60% to ₹437.2 crore in the six months ended

September 2025, as per the

teams ■ It is piloting commercialisation ? of its Al capabilities to external businesses

for salaries of Al company's red herring prospectus. At this trajectory, continuing to rent infrastructure would mean spiralling costs. "When deploying AI-based solutions at consumer scale, cloud infrastructure costs from providers like Amazon Web Services, Microsoft's Azure, and Google Cloud can quickly become unsustainable," said a Bangalore-based analyst tracking the sector. "When you're processing billions of data points daily and serving 200 millionplus users, the difference between AWS/Azure pricing and owned infrastructure can be hundreds of crores annually."

According to the firm's RHP,

Meeshowill deploy ₹1,390 crore for cloud infrastructure and ₹480 crore for salaries of AI and machine learning teams at subsidiary Meesho Technologies. Such optimisations become

even more critical for Meesho as it operates at thinner margins as compared to other e-commerce players. The platform

operates with an average order value of ₹274, roughly onethird of traditional e-commerce players at ₹830-1,000. At such levels, even minor inefficiencies in recommendations or logistics routing can destroy unit economics, analysts suggest.

The payoff for moving to inhouse infrastructure is visible with Valmo, Meesho's logistics aggregation platform. Valmo has scaled from handling just 1.83% of orders in FY23 to 61.06% by April-June 2025, processing nearly two-thirds of the platform's 1.26 billion orders. By routing orders across 13,683 small logistics partners, Valmo helps sellers save up to 12% on shipping costs per parcel. As more orders get processed through this routing mechanism, load on the AI engine will also increase, validating the need for internal infrastructure.

The strategic shift follows Meesho's contentious experience with third-party providers. AWS initiated arbitration proceedings against Meesho over ₹127 crore in alleged unpaid bills under a February 2022 contract, with Meesho filing a counterclaim of ₹86 crore citing ser vice deficiencies. The company has since moved to Google Cloud, but the dispute underscores dependency risks.

SIM-binding to plug security gap: Govt

PEGGING CYBER-FRAUD losses at over ₹22,800 crore in 2024 alone, the government on Monday said its latest directions on mandatory, continuous SIM-device binding for use of messaging apps are "essential to plug a concrete security gap" that cybercriminals are exploiting to run large-scale, often

The direction does not affect the cases where the SIM is present in the handset, and the user is on roaming, the Ministry of Communications release said.

"DoT's SIM-binding directions are essential to plug a concrete security gap that cybercriminals are exploiting to run large-scale, often cross-border, digital frauds. Accounts on instant messaging and calling apps continue to work even after the associated SIM is removed, deactivated or moved abroad, enabling anonymous scams, remote digital arrest frauds and government-impersonation calls using Indian numbers,"the

INDUSTRY BODY COAL on Monday said Telecom Department's move mandating that messaging apps like WhatsApp will work only with an active SIM would bolster national security and pledged telecom operators' commitment to supporting seamless implementation of the latest directive. Such continuous linkage ensures complete accountability and traceability for any activity undertaken by the SIM card and its associated communication app, "closing long-persistent gaps that have enabled anonymity

Telcos: Mandatory move for Telecommunications (DoT) for taking a landmark step towards bolstering national security and safeguarding our citizens, by mandating SIM-binding for devices for app-based communication services," SP Kochhar, director general of COAI, said. The comment from the apex

body comes after directions by government that would ensure app-based communication services are continuously linked to a user's active SIM card. —PTI

Meesho bets over 40% of IPO money on in-house Al infra

ANEES HUSSAIN Bengaluru, December 1

E-COMMERCE PLATFORM MEESHO'S proprietary AI engine already drives 74.57% of all orders on its platform to power personalised recommendations, dynamic pricing, and automated cataloging. Now, the company is betting ₹1,870 crore — which forms 44% of its ₹5,421 crore IPO proceeds — towards owning the infrastructure to run this AI, which it thinks will be cheaper than renting it from cloud giants like Amazon Web Services, Azure, or Google Cloud.

The investment reflects a critical inflection point: Meesho's AI has grown so large that the economics of relying on external cloud computing no longer works. The platform's BharatMLStack AI engine processes 5.92 billion data points daily, and makes 6.4 trillion real-time predictions at peak, as of September 30, 2025, up 40% in just four months since filing its draft red herring prospectus (DRHP). Meanwhile, data storage jumped 34% to 55 petabytes during the same period. Server and software costs surged 60% to ₹437.2 crore in the six months ended September 2025, as per the

■ It is piloting commercialisation of its Al capabilities to external businesses

company's red herring prospectus. At this trajectory, continuing to rent infrastructure would mean spiralling costs.

"When deploying AI-based solutions at consumer scale, cloud infrastructure costs from providers like Amazon Web Services, Microsoft's Azure, and Google Cloud can quickly become unsustainable," said a Bangalore-based analyst tracking the sector. "When you're processing billions of data points daily and serving 200 million-plus users, the difference between AWS/Azure pricing and owned infrastructure can be hundreds of crores annually."

■ AWS initiated

against Meesho

over ₹127 cr in

alleged unpaid bills

arbitration

proceedings

According to the firm's RHP, Meeshowill deploy ₹1,390 crore for cloud infrastructure and ₹480 crore for salaries of AI and machine learning teams at subsidiary Meesho Technologies.

Such optimisations become even more critical for Meesho as it operates at thinner margins as compared to other e-commerce players. The platform

operates with an average order value of ₹274, roughly onethird of traditional e-commerce players at ₹830-1,000. At such levels, even minor in efficiencies in recommendations or logistics routing can destroy unit economics, analysts suggest.

The payoff for moving to inhouse infrastructure is visible with Valmo, Meesho's logistics aggregation platform. Valmo has scaled from handling just 1.83% of orders in FY23 to 61.06% by April-June 2025, processing nearly two-thirds of the platform's 1.26 billion orders. By routing orders across 13,683 small logistics partners, Valmo helps sellers save up to 12% on shipping costs per parcel. As more orders get processed through this routing mechanism, load on the AI engine will also increase, validating the need for internal infrastructure.

The strategic shift follows Meesho's contentious experiencewith third-party providers. AWS initiated arbitration proceedings against Meesho over ₹127 crore in alleged unpaid bills under a February 2022 contract, with Meesho filing a counterclaim of ₹86 crore citing service deficiencies. The company has since moved to Google Cloud, but the dispute underscores dependency risks.

SIM-binding to plug security gap: Govt

PEGGING CYBER-FRAUD losses at over ₹22,800 crore in 2024 alone, the government on Monday said its latest directions on mandatory, continuous SIM-device binding for use of messaging apps are "essential to plug a concrete security gap" that cybercriminals are exploiting to run large-scale, often cross-border, digital frauds. The direction does not affect the cases where the SIM is present in the handset, and the user is on roaming, the Ministry of Communications

assured in a release.

"DoT's SIM-binding directions are essential to plug a concrete security gap that cybercriminals are exploiting to run large-scale, often cross-border, digital frauds. Accounts on instant messaging and calling apps continue to work even after government-impersonation the associated SIM is removed, deactivated or moved abroad, enabling anonymous scams, remote digital arrest frauds and calls using Indian numbers,"the release said.

Telcos: Mandatory move for messaging apps a milestone

INDUSTRY BODY COAL on Monday said Telecom Department's move mandating that messaging apps like WhatsApp will work only with an active SIM would bolster national security and pledged telecom operators' commitment to supporting seamless implementation of the latest directive. Such continuous linkage ensures complete accountability and traceability for any activity undertaken by the SIM card and its associated communication app, "closing long-persistent gaps that have enabled anonymity and misuse,"COAI said.

"COAI welcomes and commends the Department of Telecommunications (DoT) for taking a landmark step towards bolstering national security and safeguarding our citizens, by mandating SIM-binding for devices for app-based communication services," SP Kochhar, director general of COAI, said. The comment from the apex

body comes after directions by government that would ensure app-based communication services are continuously linked to a user's active SIM card. —PTI

Meesho bets over 40% of IPO money on in-house Al infra

ANEES HUSSAIN Bengaluru, December 1

E-COMMERCE PLATFORM MEESHO'S proprietary AI engine already drives 74.57% of all orders on its platform to power personalised recommendations, dynamic pricing, and automated cataloging. Now, the company is betting ₹1,870 crore — which forms 44% of its ₹5,421 crore IPO proceeds — towards owning the infrastructure to run this AI. which it thinks will be cheaper than renting it from cloud giants like Amazon Web Services, Azure, or Google Cloud. The investment reflects a critical inflection point: Meesho's AI has grown so large that the economics of relying on external cloud computing no longerworks. The platform's BharatMLStack AI engine processes 5.92 billion data points daily, and makes 6.4 trillion real-time predictions at peak, as of September 30, 2025, up 40% in just four months since filing its draft red herring prospectus (DRHP). Meanwhile, data storage jumped 34% to 55 petabytes during the same period. Server and software costs surged 60% to ₹437.2 crore in the six months ended September 2025, as per the STRATEGIC MOVE platform operates! with an average order value of Meesho will ₹274 deploy

₹1,390 crore for cloud infra & ₹480 crore for salaries of Al teams

■ It is piloting commercialisation of its Al capabilities to external businesses

company's red herring prospectus. At this trajectory, continuing to rent infrastructure would mean spiralling costs.

"When deploying AI-based solutions at consumer scale, cloud infrastructure costs from providers like Amazon Web Services, Microsoft's Azure, and Google Cloud can quickly become unsustainable," said a Bangalore-based analyst tracking the sector. "When you're processing billions of data points daily and serving 200 millionplus users, the difference between AWS/Azure pricing and owned infrastructure can be hundreds of crores annually." According to the firm's RHP,

Meeshowill deploy ₹1,390 crore

for cloud infrastructure and ₹480 crore for salaries of AI and machine learning teams at subsidiary Meesho Technologies. Such optimisations become even more critical for Meesho as it operates at thinner margins as compared to other e-commerce players. The platform operates with an average order value of ₹274, roughly onethird of traditional e-commerce players at ₹830-1,000. At such levels, even minor inefficiencies in recommendations or logistics routing can destroy unit economics, analysts suggest.

The payoff for moving to inhouse infrastructure is visible with Valmo, Meesho's logistics aggregation platform. Valmo has scaled from handling just 1.83% of orders in FY23 to 61.06% by April-June 2025, processing nearly two-thirds of the platform's 1.26 billion orders. By routing orders across 13,683 small logistics partners, Valmo helps sellers save up to 12% on shipping costs per parcel. As more orders get processed through this routing mechanism, load on the AI engine will also increase, validating the need for internal infrastructure.

The strategic shift follows Meesho's contentious experience with third-party providers. AWS initiated arbitration proceedings against Meesho over ₹127 crore in alleged unpaid bills under a February 2022 contract, with Meesho filing a counterclaim of ₹86 crore citing service deficiencies. The company has since moved to Google Cloud, but the dispute underscores dependency risks.

SIM-binding to plug security gap: Govt

PEGGING CYBER-FRAUD losses at over ₹22,800 crore in 2024 alone, the government on Monday said its latest directions on mandatory, continuous SIM-device binding for use of messaging apps are "essential to plug a concrete security gap" that cybercriminals are exploiting to run large-scale, often cross-border, digital frauds.

affect the cases where the SIM is present in the handset, and the user is on roaming, the Ministry of Communications

The direction does not

assured in a release.

"DoT's SIM-binding directions are essential to plug a concrete security gap that cybercriminals are exploiting to run large-scale, often cross-border, digital frauds. Accounts on instant messaging and calling apps continue to work even after the associated SIM is removed, deactivated or moved abroad, enabling anonymous scams, remote digital arrest frauds and government-impersonation calls using Indian numbers," the release said.

Telcos: Mandatory move for messaging apps a milestone

INDUSTRY BODY COAI on Monday said Telecom Department's move mandating that messaging apps like WhatsApp will work only with an active SIM would bolster national security and pledged telecom operators' commitment to supporting seamless implementation of the latest directive. Such continuous linkage ensures complete accountability and traceability for any activity undertaken by the SIM card and its associated communication app, "closing long-persistent gaps that have enabled anonymity

and misuse,"COAI said.

"COAI welcomes and commends the Department of Telecommunications (DoT) for taking a landmark step towards bolstering national security and safeguarding our citizens, by mandating SIM-binding for devices for app-based communication services," SP Kochhar, director general of COAI, said.

The comment from the apex body comes after directions by government that would ensure app-based communication services are continuously linked to a user's active SIM card. —PTI

Meesho bets over 40% of IPO money on in-house Al infra

ANEES HUSSAIN Bengaluru, December 1

E-COMMERCE PLATFORM MEESHO'S proprietary AI engine already drives 74.57% of all orders on its platform to power personalised recommendations, dynamic pricing, and automated cataloging. Now, the company is betting ₹1,870 crore — which forms 44% of its ₹5,421 crore IPO proceeds — towards owning the infrastructure to run this AI, which it thinks will be cheaper than renting it from cloud giants like Amazon Web Services, Azure, or Google Cloud.

The investment reflects a critical inflection point: Meesho's AI has grown so large that the economics of relying on external cloud computing no longerworks. The platform's BharatMLStack AI engine processes 5.92 billion data points daily, and makes 6.4 trillion real-time predictions at peak, as of September 30, 2025, up 40% in just four months since filing its draft red herring prospectus (DRHP). Meanwhile, data storage jumped 34% to 55 petabytes during the same period. Server and software costs surged 60% to ₹437.2 crore in the six months ended September 2025, as per the

■ The platform operates ! with an average order value of Meesho will ₹274 deploy ₹1,390 crore for cloud infra & ■ Valmo has scaled from ₹480 crore handling just 1.83% of for salaries of Al orders in FY23 to 61.06%

teams ■ It is piloting commercialisation of its Al capabilities to external businesses

company's red herring prospectus. At this trajectory, continuing to rent infrastructure would mean spiralling costs.

STRATEGIC MOVE

"When deploying AI-based solutions at consumer scale, cloud infrastructure costs from providers like Amazon Web Services, Microsoft's Azure, and Google Cloud can quickly become unsustainable," said a Bangalore-based analyst tracking the sector. "When you're processing billions of data points daily and serving 200 millionplus users, the difference between AWS/Azure pricing and owned infrastructure can be hundreds of crores annually."

According to the firm's RHP,

Meeshowill deploy ₹1,390 crore

by April-June 2025

arbitration

proceedings

■ AWS initiated

against Meesho

over ₹127 cr in

alleged unpaid bills

for cloud infrastructure and ₹480 crore for salaries of AI and machine learning teams at subsidiary Meesho Technologies. Such optimisations become

even more critical for Meesho as it operates at thinner margins as compared to other e-commerce players. The platform

operates with an average order value of ₹274, roughly onethird of traditional e-commerce players at ₹830-1,000. At such levels, even minor inefficiencies in recommendations or logistics routing can destroy unit

economics, analysts suggest. The payoff for moving to inhouse infrastructure is visible with Valmo, Meesho's logistics aggregation platform. Valmo has scaled from handling just 1.83% of orders in FY23 to 61.06% by April-June 2025, processing nearly two-thirds of the platform's 1.26 billion orders. By routing orders across 13,683 small logistics partners, Valmo helps sellers save up to 12% on shipping costs per parcel. As more orders get processed through this routing mechanism, load on the AI engine will also increase, validating the need for internal infrastructure.

The strategic shift follows Meesho's contentious experience with third-party providers. AWS initiated arbitration proceedings against Meesho over ₹127 crore in alleged unpaid bills under a February 2022 contract, with Meesho filing a counterclaim of ₹86 crore citing ser vice deficiencies. The company has since moved to Google Cloud, but the dispute underscores dependency risks.

SIM-binding to plug security gap: Govt

PEGGING CYBER-FRAUD losses at over ₹22,800 crore in 2024 alone, the government on Monday said its latest directions on mandatory, continuous SIM-device binding for use of messaging apps are "essential to plug a concrete security gap" that cybercriminals are exploiting to run large-scale, often cross-border, digital frauds.

The direction does not affect the cases where the SIM is present in the handset, and the user is on roaming, the Ministry of Communications

assured in a release.

release said.

"DoT's SIM-binding directions are essential to plug a concrete security gap that cybercriminals are exploiting to run large-scale, often cross-border, digital frauds. Accounts on instant messaging and calling apps continue to work even after the associated SIM is removed, deactivated or moved abroad, enabling anonymous scams, remote digital arrest frauds and government-impersonation calls using Indian numbers,"the

ment's move mandating that messaging apps like WhatsApp will work only with an active SIM would bolster national security and pledged telecom operators' commitment to supporting seamless implementation of the latest directive. Such continuous linkage ensures complete accountability and traceability for any activity undertaken by the SIM card and its associated communication app, "closing long-persistent gaps that have enabled anonymity

messaging apps a milestone

"COAI welcomes and commends the Department of Telecommunications (DoT) for taking a landmark step towards bolstering national security and safeguarding our citizens, by mandating SIM-binding for devices for app-based communication services," SP Kochhar, director general of COAI, said. The comment from the apex

body comes after directions by government that would ensure app-based communication services are continuously linked to a user's active SIM card. —PTI

Meesho bets over 40% of IPO money on in-house Al infra

ANEES HUSSAIN Bengaluru, December 1

E-COMMERCE PLATFORM MEESHO'S proprietary AI engine already drives 74.57% of all orders on its platform to power personalised recommendations, dynamic pricing, and automated cataloging. Now, the company is betting ₹1,870 crore — which forms 44% of its ₹5,421 crore IPO proceeds — towards owning the infrastructure to run this AI, which it thinks will be cheaper than renting it from cloud giants like Amazon Web Services, Azure, or Google Cloud. The investment reflects a critical inflection point: Meesho's AI has grown so large that the economics of relying on external cloud computing no longerworks. The platform's BharatMLStack AI engine processes 5.92 billion data points daily, and makes 6.4 trillion real-time predictions at peak, as of September 30, 2025, up 40% in just four months since filing its draft red herring prospectus (DRHP). Meanwhile, data storage jumped 34% to 55 petabytes during the same period. Server and software costs surged 60% to ₹437.2 crore in the six months ended September 2025, as per the STRATEGIC MOVE ■The platform operates with an average order value of Meesho will deploy ₹1,390 crore for cloud infra & ■ Valmo has scaled from ₹480 crore handling just 1.83% of for salaries of AI orders in FY23 to 61.06% teams by April-June 2025

■ It is piloting commercialisation of its Al capabilities to external businesses

company's red herring prospectus. At this trajectory, continuing to rent infrastructure would mean spiralling costs.

"When deploying AI-based solutions at consumer scale, cloud infrastructure costs from providers like Amazon Web Services, Microsoft's Azure, and Google Cloud can quickly become unsustainable," said a Bangalore-based analyst tracking the sector. "When you're processing billions of data points daily and serving 200 million-plus users, the difference between AWS/Azure pricing and owned infrastructure can be hundreds of crores annually."

According to the firm's RHP,

■ AWS initiated

against Meesho

over ₹127 cr in

alleged unpaid bills

arbitration

proceedings

Meeshowill deploy ₹1,390 crore for cloud infrastructure and ₹480 crore for salaries of AI and machine learning teams at subsidiary Meesho Technologies.

Such optimisations become even more critical for Meesho as it operates at thinner margins as compared to other e-commerce players. The platform

operates with an average order value of ₹274, roughly onethird of traditional e-commerce players at ₹830-1,000. At such levels, even minor in efficiencies in recommendations or logistics routing can destroy unit economics, analysts suggest.

The payoff for moving to inhouse infrastructure is visible with Valmo, Meesho's logistics aggregation platform. Valmo has scaled from handling just 1.83% of orders in FY23 to 61.06% by April-June 2025, processing nearly two-thirds of the platform's 1.26 billion orders. By routing orders across 13,683 small logistics partners, Valmo helps sellers save up to 12% on shipping costs per parcel. As more orders get processed through this routing mechanism, load on the AI engine will also increase, validating the need for internal infrastructure.

The strategic shift follows Meesho's contentious experiencewith third-party providers. AWS initiated arbitration proceedings against Meesho over ₹127 crore in alleged unpaid bills under a February 2022 contract, with Meesho filing a counterclaim of ₹86 crore citing service deficiencies. The company has since moved to Google Cloud, but the dispute underscores dependency risks.

SIM-binding to plug security gap: Govt

PEGGING CYBER-FRAUD losses at over ₹22,800 crore in 2024 alone, the government on Monday said its latest directions on mandatory, continuous SIM-device binding for use of messaging apps are "essential to plug a concrete security gap" that cybercriminals are exploiting to run large-scale, often cross-border, digital frauds.

The direction does not affect the cases where the SIM is present in the handset, and the user is on roaming, the Ministry of Communications assured in a release.

"DoT's SIM-binding directions are essential to plug a concrete security gap that cybercriminals are exploiting to run large-scale, often cross-border, digital frauds. Accounts on instant messaging and calling apps continue to work even after the associated SIM is removed, deactivated or moved abroad, enabling anonymous scams, remote digital arrest frauds and government-impersonation calls using Indian numbers,"the release said.

messaging apps a milestone INDUSTRY BODY COAL on and misuse,"COAI said.

Telcos: Mandatory move for

Monday said Telecom Department's move mandating that messaging apps like WhatsApp will work only with an active

SIM would bolster national security and pledged telecom operators' commitment to supporting seamless implementation of the latest directive. Such continuous linkage ensures complete accountability and traceability for any activity undertaken by the SIM card and its associated communication app, "closing long-persistent gaps

"COAI welcomes and commends the Department of Telecommunications (DoT) for taking a landmark step towards bolstering national security and safeguarding our citizens, by mandating SIM-binding for devices for app-based communication services," SP Kochhar, director general of COAI, said.

The comment from the apex body comes after directions by government that would ensure app-based communication services are continuously linked to a user's active SIM card. —PTI
