FraudZap™, AI powered Fraud Management Solution Gains Momentum, Powering a North-American Deployment

Bengaluru, India – February 5th, 2026: Subex, a leader in AI-driven telecom solutions, today announced a deal win with a North American AI and Data transformation specialist providing services to telecom operators in the region, to launch subscription and handset fraud risk assessment services.

Built on Subex's FraudZap™, the solution applies AI to help telecom operators tackle handset fraud, one of the most significant fraud challenges in the industry. It enables CSPs to identify high-risk activity early and take timely action to protect revenues while maintaining a smooth customer experience.

Powered by Subex's AI-led solution expertise in fraud management, the North-American entity can offer CSPs a scalable, low-latency approach to mitigating subscription and handset fraud, helping protect revenues while maintaining a smooth onboarding experience.

The introduction of FraudZap™ marks an important step in broadening Subex's play in the telecom fraud space offering a lightweight, plug-and-play, AI-powered solution for handset and device fraud that is quick to deploy and easy to run.

Nisha Dutt, MD & CEO of Subex, said:

"In roughly a year of initiating work on FraudZap™, as an Indian product company we've secured an AI deal in North-America, the seat of major AI innovation today. I am proud of my team in getting us to this important milestone that reinforces our conviction in AI, showcases maturity of our AI team and highlights our return to product engineering and capital allocation discipline embedded in our commitment to building functional, market-ready products."

At Subex we are committed to use best of breed technologies and work with world class partners to help CSPs solve their biggest fraud management challenges."
