Dear Sirs,

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine whether the use of a computerized program designed to teach the basic concepts of epidemiology would increase knowledge about epidemiologic principles among health care workers. A pretest-posttest design was used. The sample consisted of 60 health care workers from a tertiary-level hospital in Mexico City. The mean age was 37 years, and 80% were female. All participants completed a questionnaire before and after completing the course. The results showed that the majority of participants had no previous exposure to epidemiology. After completing the course, there was a significant increase in knowledge about epidemiologic principles ($p < .001$). The findings suggest that the use of a computerized program can be useful as a teaching tool for health care workers.

Abstract
