Indian IT firms see shift away from discretionary work as RoI-led projects gain pace

New Delhi.(Agency)

India's top IT services firms say clients are increasingly approving technology projects based on return on investment rather than discretionary budgets. Infosys, Tata Consultancy Services (TCS) and HCLTech said artificial intelligence and automation are helping revive modernisation and transformation projects that were earlier put on hold, even as overall demand remains tight.

HCLTech said it delivered revenue growth in the December quarter despite what it described as a constrained demand environment, supported by AI-powered solutions and large-scale transformation programmes. "I believe there is little value in waiting for either historical or anticipated discretionary spending to resume. Instead, the focus should be on opportunity—identifying proactively where the spending is occurring and targeting those opportunities," HCLTech CEO C Vijayakumar said during the Q3 press conference. He added that the company is no longer waiting for discretionary spending to return to levels seen a few years ago or in the post-Covid period. "Traditional discretionary areas, like SaaS and some of these things, are not where a lot of spend is happening. But spending is happening in what I call day-minus-one work for AI. There is so much capex investment going into data centres, and there are a lot of professional services around that," he said. Additionally, Vijayakumar said spending is also happening on robotics and physical AI. "These are the areas—along with semiconductors and silicon for edge inferencing—where we see significant spend. We are really chasing where the money is getting invested." Wipro CEO Srinivas Pallia also said the company is looking to service data centres. "Data centres are a big investment area. If you look at it, every year there is about a billion dollars of capital being spent on infrastructure for AI—whether it is data centres, GPUs and so on. By 2030, it is going to be $3 billion per day," he said. He also joked: "And the interesting part is, soon there will be data centres in space. We've got to think about that too."

Infosys said the use of AI-driven software agents has made projects such as legacy modernisation more viable for clients. "If you take legacy modernisation, and you use software agents along with our expertise and knowledge, the whole economics from a client perspective becomes much better," Infosys CEO Salil Parekh said during the Q3 earnings press conference. "That allows a lot of these projects, which were not happening before, to start happening."

Mutual Fund: Eight NFOs open now; check all thematic funds to ETF FoFs

New Delhi.(Agency)

Despite volatile stock markets, the mutual fund industry in India continues to display vibrancy. As many as eight New Fund Offerings are open right now. These offer investors the opportunity to buy units of the scheme at Rs 10, which usually climbs after they hit the market. Three of the eight funds are Fund of Funds that are linked to gold and silver ETFs, thanks to the persistent surge in the price of these two commodities. Let's have a look at the details of each. Min investment: Rs. 1000/- and in multiples of Re. 1/- thereafter.

Objective of scheme: The investment objective of the Scheme is to seek capital appreciation by investing in units of Gold ETF. However, there can be no assurance or guarantee that the investment objective of the Scheme will be achieved.

Exit Load: 0.25% if redeemed on or before 15 days from the allotment date. Nil if redeemed after 15 days from the allotment date.

Min investment: Rs. 1000/- and in multiples of Re. 1/- thereafter. Objective of scheme: The investment objective of the Scheme is to seek to generate returns by investing in units of Silver ETF. However, there can be no assurance that the investment objective of the Scheme will be realised.

Amid plans to induct Noel's son, Tata trust cancels meet

MUMBAI.(Agency)

The Sir Ratan Tata Trust (SRTT) cancelled its Saturday board meeting, which was expected to consider the induction of chairman Noel Tata's son, Neville Tata, as a trustee. In contrast, board meetings of Sir Dorabji Tata Trust (SDTT) and Tata Education and Development Trust (TEDT) proceeded as scheduled. The cancellation suggests that Neville's appointment may have been pushed back to give trustees more time for discussions—since appointing a trustee requires unanimous approval. No new date for the SRTT meeting has been notified. An email query to Tata Trusts on the cancellation of the board meeting received no response. Sir Ratan Tata Trust (SRTT), Sir Dorabji Tata Trust (SDTT), and Tata Education and Development Trust (TEDT) have several trustees in common. Except for Jehangir HC Jehangir and Jimmy Tata, the other SRTT trustees—Noel, Venu Srinivasan, Vijay Singh and Darius Khambata—also serve on SDTT's board and participated in its meeting on Saturday, people familiar with the matter said. Jimmy, Noel's older half-brother, usually does not attend SRTT meetings.

Saturday's development comes amid unresolved issues from the last round of inductions in Nov 2025 when the inductions of Neville and former Titan MD Bhaskar Bhat were approved by SDTT but failed to secure approval at SRTT. SDTT, together with SRTT, controls India's largest conglomerate, the Tata Group. At the Nov 11, 2025 SDTT meeting, Khambata proposed Neville's appointment, while Noel proposed Bhat, as TOI reported in its Nov 12 edition. Neither name was on the formal board agenda. All trustees of SDTT approved the appointments (Srinivasan did not attend the meeting as his term had expired).

Jewellery, coins, Sovereign Gold Bonds, gold ETFs, gold mutual funds, and digital gold may all mirror the same metal, yet each one produces a very different tax outcome. Read on to understand how gold taxation really works.

New Delhi.(Agency)

Gold prices are at record levels, and that is changing how Indians think about the metal. As prices climb higher, more households are buying gold than ever before, whether to protect savings, hedge uncertainty, or simply because gold still feels safer than most financial assets. For generations, buying gold in India was the simplest financial decision a household could make. People bought it, stored it, and forgot about it. There was little need to think beyond weight and purity. That simplicity has quietly disappeared. Gold today comes wrapped in many forms. Jewellery, coins, Sovereign Gold Bonds, gold ETFs, gold mutual funds, and digital gold may all track the same metal, but they behave very differently once taxes enter the picture. Most investors realise this only at the point of sale, when the price looks great, but the post-tax outcome does not.

MANY SHADES OF GOLD TAXATION

"Indians invest in gold through several avenues today, including physical gold such as jewellery and coins, Sovereign Gold Bonds, gold ETFs, gold mutual funds and digital gold," says Jayant Manglik, Partner at Fortuna Asset Managers. He explains that although each instrument broadly tracks the price of gold, the tax results differ significantly. Physical and digital gold attract GST when purchased and capital gains when sold. ETFs and mutual funds are treated as financial assets. "Sovereign Gold Bonds are distinct because the interest is taxable, but the capital gains at maturity are exempt from tax," he says.

Sneha Padhia, Partner for Direct Tax at Bhuta Shah and Co. LLP, says a large number of investors still assume all gold is taxed identically. According to her, the biggest divide is between physical gold and what she calls paper gold.

"Physical gold, digital gold, gold ETFs and gold mutual funds are taxed similarly. Long term capital gains are taxed at 12.5 percent without indexation," she says. She adds that SGPs enjoy complete capital gains exemption at maturity if redeemed with the RBI, a benefit that no other gold product offers.

WHY INVESTORS GO WRONG

Manglik believes the most common misunderstanding is the belief that holding periods do not matter. "Physical and digital gold require a longer holding period to qualify for long-term capital gains compared to gold ETFs and mutual funds," he says. He adds that selling early, even by a few months, can push the gains into the short-term category and trigger much higher taxes. "Long term gains are taxed as per prevailing rules, without indexation," he notes, and frequent changes in regulations have caused many investors to rely on outdated assumptions. Padhia sees the same pattern. "Most confusion arises because people think all paper gold is tax-free like SGPs," she says. She points out that investors also misinterpret digital gold and assume it functions like physical gold, even though documentation standards and cost calculations differ.

Budget 2026: What Is the Economic Survey And Why Does It Matter Key Facts Explained

New Delhi.(Agency)

The countdown to the Union Budget 2026 will officially begin with the presentation of the Economic Survey for FY2025-26, which Finance Minister Nirmala Sitharaman will table in Parliament on Thursday, January 29, 2026. Released every year a day before the Budget, the Economic Survey offers a detailed snapshot of India's economic health, key developments, and challenges faced over the past financial year. Prepared by the Department of Economic Affairs under the Ministry of Finance, the report plays a crucial role in setting the context for the government's budgetary decisions. While most Indians are familiar with the Annual Financial Statement, commonly known as the Budget, many are still unclear about what the Economic Survey is and why it plays such an important role in this yearly exercise. The Economic Survey is an annual report that takes a close look at how the Indian economy is performing. It is prepared by the Economic Division of the Department of Economic Affairs under the Ministry of Finance, with guidance from the Chief Economic Adviser. It was first introduced in 1950-51 alongside the Union Budget. The Survey has been presented as a separate document since 1964. It offers the government's detailed assessment of the economy over the past financial year, covering key aspects such as economic growth, inflation, employment, trade, and the overall health of public finances.

Who Brings Out the Economic Survey? The Economic Survey is put together by the Chief Economic Adviser of India along with their team in the Ministry of Finance. Once ready, it is formally presented in Parliament by the Finance Minister, making it one of the key documents released ahead of the Union Budget each year. What Does the Economic Survey Tell Us?

The Economic Survey is structured in three parts, each offering valuable insights into India's economy. The first and most crucial section presents an overall review of key economic issues along with the Chief Economic Adviser's perspective, helping readers understand the government's view on the country's financial health. The second section focuses on sector-wise data, featuring detailed statistics provided by various ministries and departments. The third section dives into broader economic numbers, covering areas such as national income, production, employment, inflation, balance of trade, and export-import trends, giving a complete picture of the economy.

FII Selling Trend May Continue Till Some Positive Triggers Happen: Analysts

New Delhi.(Agency)

The foreign institutional investor (FII) selling trend may continue in India until some positive triggers for a market rally happen, analysts have said. The sustained selling by FIIs continued for the week ending January 16. The total FII selling for January (up to 16th) stood at Rs 22,529 crore.

"This month, FIIs were sellers on all days except one. The underperformance of India vis-a-vis other major markets is continuing in early 2026 also. Year-to-date (YTD) return from Nifty stands at -1.73 per cent," said Dr VK Vijayakumar, Chief Investment Strategist, Geojit Investments Ltd. A significant feature of the market behaviour in 2025 was that India's tepid performance last year (Nifty return of 10 per cent) was despite the massive DII investment of Rs 7,44 lakh crore, which completely eclipsed the total FII selling of Rs 166,283 crore. A key reason was the poor earnings growth and the consequent elevated valuations. The continuing suspense over the US-India trade agreement also impacted the sentiments, said analysts. "The AI trade which dominated stock market trend in 2025 is continuing in early 2026 also. A reversal of this trend might happen sometime in 2026," said Vijayakumar. Markets largely consolidated last week amid mixed cues and ended almost unchanged. After a volatile start, benchmark indices remained range-bound in the subsequent sessions.

The Nifty and Sensex finally settled at 25,694.35 and 83,570.35, respectively. Broader indices moved largely in line with the benchmarks and ended with modest gains. "Optimism from better-than-expected Q3 earnings by select large-cap IT companies was offset by tariff-related uncertainties, geopolitical tensions, and continued foreign fund outflows," said Ajit Mishra-SVP, Research, Religare Broking Ltd. From a flows perspective, FIIs remained net sellers, extending their recent selling trend, he added. Next week is expected to be data-heavy and crucial for short-term market direction.

Will AI crash like the dot-com boom

Kolkata.(Agency)

In the late '90s, India fell in love with the internet. Neon lit cybercafes were everywhere; companies were adding ".com" to their names to double valuations with little more than a URL and a pitch deck; investors believed they were sitting on a gold mine, dreaming of a future where clicks would replace commerce. Valuations soared. Startups with no revenue—and often no product—were going public. Then came 2000: the music stopped, and the mirage cleared. Trillions of dollars and inflated dreams evaporated. The dot-com bust didn't kill the internet—it killed the promise of an instant digital future. Instead, it cleared the runway for sustainable adoption. Out of that rubble rose Google, Amazon, and the foundations of the modern digital economy. Reality reset, driven by those who deliberately built for the future. The lesson is clear: most technology revolutions don't arrive with a bang. They arrive disguised as slow, frustrating, incremental change. Hype cycles around technology are not new. Our amnesia around them seems to be. I first noticed AI entering enterprise in deployable forms around 2013—embedded in chatbots, predictive analytics, and fraud detection systems. Years later, we have arrived at generative AI, a tremendous leap: systems that can create content, design workflows, write code, and even offer decision-making guidance. ChatGPT took the world by storm not just because it was powerful, but because it was accessible. Now, everyone can play. That level of unfettered access changed the conversation almost overnight. Artificial intelligence offers alluring dreams—promising to write better code, replace customer support, and even create unicorns run by a single founder and a dozen agents. But the enterprise has yet to catch up with the dazzling headlines. Business-wide AI adoption is slower and more complex. It is often uneven and fragmented, with AI labs operating in isolated silos. This is not about plugging in a new tool; it is about rewiring an entire system—shifting how we work, learn, and even think.

Crash probability

The question is whether AI will crash like the dot-com bubble. The probability, I would argue, is around 33 per cent—not inevitable, but very possible. This is not alarmist. The ingredients are familiar: soaring valuations, inexperienced startups, overhyped demos, bold headlines, and investors chasing the next miracle without understanding the technology or its use cases. Many organisations remain stuck in pilot mode, with prototypes failing to translate into scaled impact—hobbled by incomplete data, a missing trust layer, and largely analog processes.
