TALENT HUNT: BEIJING IS WELCOMING TOP PROFESSIONALS TO ADVANCE THEIR CAREERS

K-Visa: China to woo global minds

AGENCIES

September 22

AS THE US raises its H-1B visa fee to $100,000, China is welcoming global talent with a new K Visa. The visa aims to make entry and stay easier for young foreign talent contributing to China's innovation and research sectors.

China on Monday declined to comment on US President Donald Trump's move to impose a hefty fee for H-1B visas, but at the same time invited global professionals to work in the country as it prepares to roll out a new employment visa next month.

On Friday last week, the Trump administration announced a $1,00,000 fee on H-1B visas. The fee is a one-time fee on submission of a new H-1B petition.

"China will not comment on the US visa policy," Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesperson Guo Jiakun told a media briefing

NEW AVENUE

■ K-Visa aims to ease entry and stay for young professionals
■ Indians hold 71% of H-1B visas; Chinese 11.7%

■ K-Visa effective Oct 1; targets science and technology talent

■ No domestic employer required for K-Visa application

■ K-Visa approved by State Council; signed into law by Premier Li Qiang

■ Visa allows education, cultural exchange, research, entrepreneurship

■ China adds K-Visa to existing 12 ordinary visa types when asked about Trump's decision. However, at the same time, he said in the era of globalisation, cross-border talents promote technological and economic progress globally, and Beijing welcomes global professional talent to explore opportunities in the country. China welcomes "talents from various industries and areas across the world to come and stay in China, jointly contribute to the progress of the human society and achieve success in their careers," Guo said.

Indians account for nearly 71% (over 2.8 lakh) of all H-1B visas, followed by Chinese professionals with around 11.7% or over 4,600.

While the US tightens its visa regime, China last month announced a new work permit called K-Visa under which qualified professionals from across the world can come to the country and explore work opportunities.

The K-Visa, set to take effect from October 1, is aimed at attracting young science and technology talent and does not require a domestic employer or entity to issue an invitation.

China's silence on the H-1B issue comes against the backdrop of trade negotiations with the US, where student and work visas are also under discussion.

Indian student visas to US plunge 44%

MANU KAUSHIK
New Delhi, September 22

THE NUMBER OF visitors arriving in the US on student visas plummeted in August 2025, with a 44.5% year-on-year drop in Indian students and a 19% year-on-year reduction in total international students, according to the latest data from the International Trade Administration (ITA). A total of 41,540 Indian students arrived in the US in August, the lowest in six years, excluding the two pandemic years – 2020 and 2021 – when international travel was disrupted.

Similarly, the total number of international students between January and August 2025 stood at 1.02 million, the lowest in three years, highlighting the Trump administration's stringent immigration policies affecting student movement globally.

CHANGE IN PREFERENCES

The drop in student visitors comes at the peak of the fall intake period for US universities. In the US academic calendar, the fall intake starts in August and continues through December.

Nearly 70% of all international student visas are issued during this period.

The ITA data showed that the drop in international students is primarily led by Asia, specifically India, which is the second-largest source market for the US after China. China, on the other hand, registered a 12.4% year-on-year fall in August and an 8.4% drop in the January-August 2025 period compared to the same period last year. Experts said that this data is not merely a fluctuation but a turning point.

"A nearly 50% drop in Indian student visa arrivals in a single month, coupled with similar trends from China's student community, suggests that India's long-standing dominance as a source of international students for US institutions is being challenged. For many universities, the financial teeth from international tuition will bite hard, but perhaps more importantly, the pipeline of talent for science, engineering, and research sectors could dry up," said Karunn Kandoo, founder and CEO of VidyaSea Education.

UK weighs fee waiver

THE UK GOVERNMENT is looking at bolstering a drive to attract global talent with a possible visa fee waiver to support the world's top science and tech talent relocation to the country, a media report said. The Global Talent Taskforce, backed up by a 54-million-pound Global Talent Fund launched earlier this year, is revving up further to lure international experts, including Indians, even as the US announced a clampdown on its H-1B visas used by global techies. The taskforce works across 10 Downing Street and the UK Treasury to explore ways to boost the UK's economic growth.

"We're kicking around the idea of cutting (visa) costs to zero," the newspaper quoted a government official as saying. —PTI

US PRESIDENT DONALD Trump's steep hike in H-1B visa fees could hurt India's services sector, curb remittance inflows, and weigh on the rupee, economists said.

Last week, Trump ordered a sweeping overhaul of the H-1B visa program, mandating a $100,000 application fee aimed at deterring excessive use. India is especially vulnerable to these changes, as roughly 70% of H-1B visa holders in the US are Indian — many employed through Indian IT firms.

Highly skilled Indian migrants in wealthy nations are a vital source of cash for the country, steadily increasing the money they send home over the years.

The US alone provides nearly 28% of these inflows — roughly $35 billion a year, Citigroup economists, including India economist Samiran Chakraborty, estimated.

"As the number of H-1B visa holders from India declines in future years, this will reduce the remittances back to India," JP Morgan analyst Toshi Jain wrote in a client note.

In a worst case scenario, if Indians applying for H-1B visas fell to zero, the annual remittances would decline by about $400 million, Jain added.

The potential dent in remittances could put further pressure on the rupee, which has already been among Asia's worst performers.

The currency slipped 0.2% to 88.32 per dollar intrade Monday, mirroring losses in stocks. MUFG Bank sees the rupee falling to 89 by March.

"From an FX perspective, we think this development gives us more confidence that the Indian rupee will underperform Asian FX and core G10 crosses, but we think INR FX volatility should remain contained," Michael Wan, senior currency analyst at MUFG Bank, wrote in a note.

over 7% to India's gross domestic product and employs nearly 6 million professionals globally, according to National Association of Software and Service Companies, based in Bengaluru.

The visa overhaul adds to tensions in India-US ties, as New Delhi grapples with the impact of 50% tariffs recently levied by Washington.

Commerce and Industry Minister Piyush Goyal is in the US this week to resolve differences and move forward on a trade deal.

Trump's policies "increase medium-term risks" for the South Asian economy, and add pressure on the government to boost domestic demand, said Sonal Varma, economist at Nomura Holdings.

While Trump aims to protect US jobs by restricting immigrant inflows, the new rules could backfire: they will likely raise costs for American corporations and push them to step up the expansion of their so-called global capability centers in India.

Companies, including Microsoft, Google and Morgan Stanley already run large GCCs in India.

Such an expansion, combined with reduced education outflows if fewer Indian students choose to study abroad, could help offset the economic drag from slower remittance growth, Citigroup said.

It's estimated that most of India's remittance inflows come from Indians holding other types of visas or residency status.

"All told, the impact on the Balance of Payments is expected to be modest in the near term," said JP Morgan's Jain.

The bigger concern is what this does to trade negotiations and whether it's a harbinger of future pressures on offshoring."

Trump's move to curb skilled visas for foreigners adds a fresh blow to US-India ties that only last week appeared to be on the mend, creating new hurdles for a speedy trade deal.
