iPhone 17s delivered under 3 Minutes

Ahmedabad, Long known for its heritage, food-forward culture, and love for homegrown flavours, Ahmedabad is also showing how quick commerce can be thoughtful. As Instamart, India's pioneering quick commerce platform, unveils insights from the fifth edition of its annual report - How India Instamarted 2025 - the data shows that from fresh produce to flagship smartphones, Ahmedabad's carts moved at lightning speed in 2025 - including over seven iPhone 17 deliveries completed in under three minutes during Instamart's Quick India Movement sale in September 2025. This year, Ahmedabad's shopping was driven less by impulse and more by intent. The city's most-ordered items spanned premium dairy, fresh pulses, fruits, trusted cooking oils, and select global staples, signalling a clear shift towards planned, routine-led shopping, delivered in 10-minutes. From Udon Noodles to Kesar Shrikhand, Curd, fresh green gram, hara chana, pineapples, and even Cottonseed Oil, Ahmedabad's Instamart orders reflected a deliberate mix of global tastes, trusted local brands, and fresh ingredients. The carts tell a story of clarity, where speed meets choice, not compromise. (20-4)

IRF FOR INSTALLATION OF MANDATORY FRONT AND REAR FOG LIGHTS

Ahmedabad, International Road Federation (IRF), Geneva based global body working for better and safer roads worldwide expressing deep concern at increasing fatal road crashes and vehicle pile ups due to fog, has urged the Government to make front and rear fog lights mandatory on all vehicles. "The Worldwide research has shown that increased visibility between vehicles reduces crash risk by more than 30 per cent, especially during fog months of December to February and in the fog prone areas. Foggy conditions pose a threat to motorists, and a law to make both front and rear fog lights mandatory, could help reduce the risk of road crashes caused by poor visibility. Fog lights are extremely useful during conditions of poor visibility caused by rain, fog, dust or snow" said Mr K K Kapila, President Emeritus, International Road Federation (IRF). "Fog lights and automated vehicle lights that switch on due to poor natural light or fog, or during low-visibility conditions, could reduce the risk of collisions. In Europe, the vehicles are fitted with front and rear fog lights as a standard feature for better visibility in fog like conditions. However, installing fog lights will not on its own eliminate the risk of crashes during foggy conditions, various other countermeasures are also needed for providing safer driving environment, by both the Government, drivers as well as the Civic Agencies" said Mr. Kapila. Scoliosis Awareness Seminar Held in Ahmedabad

Ahmedabad, To increase awareness about scoliosis and the importance of early diagnosis, a special awareness seminar on scoliosis was organized in Ahmedabad, bringing together some of India's and the world's leading spine surgeons on a single platform. The seminar aimed to educate parents, patients, caregivers, and the general public about scoliosis—a spinal deformity that often remains undetected until it significantly progresses. The expert panel included Dr. Amit Jhala (Ahmedabad), Dr. Ajoy Prasad Shetty T (Chennai), Dr. K. Venugopal Menon (Kochi), Dr. Shaishav Bhagatara (London), Dr. Sharvin Sheth (Ahmedabad), and Dr. Hriday Acharya (Ahmedabad). The surgeons collectively highlighted the need for early detection, timely intervention, and access to modern treatment options to improve long-term outcomes. According to global and Indian studies, scoliosis affects nearly 2-3% of children and adolescents, translating to over 2 crore individuals in India. Medical experts note that in India, nearly 60-70% of scoliosis cases are diagnosed at a late stage, primarily due to lack of awareness and absence of routine screening. In Gujarat, hospital-based data indicate that 2-3 out of every 100 school-going children show signs of spinal curvature, with urban centres like Ahmedabad, Surat, Vadodra, and Rajkot witnessing a steady rise in cases over the past decade. What Putin's Delhi visit and India-Russia 2.0 mean for China

The India-Russia relationship has overwhelmingly been defined in terms of one pillar: defence. India's military modernisation, from aircraft and submarines to spare parts, has clear Russian footprints. However, the Russian President Vladimir Putin's visit to Delhi this month signalled a structural shift in this relation. As External Affairs Minister S Jaishankar noted, the India-Russia partnership, which is "one of the steadiest big relationships in the world", has now been "reimagined" to strengthen areas that have historically "lagged, particularly economic cooperation".

The consequences of this transition from defence dependence to broader economic interdependence go much beyond the bilateral realm. The India-Russia ties underscore the evolving Asian power landscape and, in particular, compel regional and global powers like China to reassess the emerging strategic environment near their periphery. This pivot is shaped by wider regional and global contexts. The long-term policy trajectory has been clear and well defined: enhancing its strategic autonomy by diversifying the supply chains, broadening economic partnerships, and minimising fragility due to one-source reliance.

While historically being heavily inclined towards Russia, India had to consider the contemporary dominant geopolitical model that is defined in terms of technological innovations, energy insecurity, and contested access to critical minerals. India's own economic ambitions that depend on industrial modernisation and electric-mobility transitions require deeper, more varied and more resilient partnerships.

Similarly, Russia's intention to seek more balanced global economic linkages is due to Western sanctions and over-dependence on China. These converging motivations have set the grounds for a renewed, reinvigorated and multi-sectoral partnership for both India and Russia.

The Delhi Summit's New Playbook

The set of agreements endorsed by the two governments in the recent summit meeting set the tone for this tactical shift, covering mutual cooperation on nuclear energy, mechanisms for critical-minerals trade, enhanced relations in shipbuilding, new frameworks for labour mobility, and strengthened coordination on fertilisers and agricultural goods.

Prime Minister Narendra Modi described the new "Economic Cooperation Programme till 2030" as central for diversifying the country's trade and investment linkages. India not only looks to buy more from Russia but also intends to build sustained long-term industrial, logistical, and regulatory mechanisms to mitigate swings in its core economic sectors.

The message from President Vladimir Putin was just as unmistakable. He reiterated that Moscow remains a "reliable supplier" and pledged "uninterrupted" fuel shipments to India. He further emphasised Moscow's intentions to broaden cooperation beyond hydrocarbons, extending into pharmaceuticals, nuclear technologies, joint manufacturing ventures, and resource-based partnerships.

The mutual commitments are reflective of economic necessity and geopolitical signalling. This high-stakes visit broadens Moscow's strategic options not to slide into exclusive dependence on Chinese markets and technology and gives room to manoeuvre a measure of agency in its Asian diplomatic engagements.

The visit is a paradigm shift from the traditional transactional model of the past and marks a shift towards co-development. The cooperation in the field of nuclear energy and agreement by Russia on setting up new reactors and small modular reactors (SMR) gives India a crucial boost in its long-term energy security and diversification strategy.

Apart from the civil-nuclear deals, labour mobility agreements, which will ease the movement of Indian workers into specific Russian sectors, add to a long-run socio-economic aspect of this partnership. And most important is the cooperation on critical minerals that could strengthen multi-decadal supply-chain linkages. In the midst of global energy transitions, these engagements between Delhi and Moscow could shape industries and the geopolitical landscape well beyond defence. The China Angle:

Marriott International Opens Its 200th Property in India

Ahmedabad, Westin Hotels & Resorts, part of Marriott Bonvoy's portfolio of 30 extraordinary brands, today announced the opening of The Westin Jaipur Kant Kalwar Resort & Spa. The brand's debut in one of India's most sought-after leisure destinations, marks a landmark opening as Marriott International's 200th property in the country. The company continues to enhance access and relevance for travellers across India, including through the recently expanded Hindi-language website. The Westin Jaipur Kant Kalwar Resort & Spa stands as a reflection of Marriott's deepening connection with the market, set across nine acres at the tranquil foothills of the majestic Aravali range, and expands Westin's restorative, balance-driven approach to hospitality in the country. Commenting on this significant milestone for India, Kiran Andicot, Senior Vice President, South Asia, Marriott International said, "Celebrating the opening of our 200th property in India is a defining moment for Marriott International and a reflection of the continued trust our guests and owners place in our brands. Over the years, our growth in India has been shaped by hotels that offer enriching experiences through distinctive design, elevated culinary programs, and service excellence that create memorable journeys. This achievement is also a testament to the resilience of the Indian hospitality sector and the strong demand we continue to see across leisure and business segments. (20-4)

Russia-India partnership enhancing India's shipbuilding capacity, energy logistics, nuclear power expansion and port cooperation would potentially strengthen its southern maritime profile in ways that would indirectly counterbalance Beijing's naval and commercial strategies.
