State Bank of India (SBI) may not go aggressive and hike interest rates to mop up deposits as it still has excess statutory liquidity ratio (SLR) to the extent of about ₹4-lakh

When it comes to interest rates, SBI will not be required to reduce its deposit rate as it has not increased it to the hilt.

Whatever be the colour of the deposit, the opportunities will be supported," he said.

there. So, we will not be required to reduce our interest (deposit) rate. So, the picture which you are seeing today will probably stay," Khara said.

the conference, Panda said IRDAI has been working closely with insurers on it. "There was an additional layer of solvency requirement which we have removed now. So from our side, I think we have done whatever we thought was appropriate. But I'm absolutely open to any more suggestions, which will help this market grow and also help our infrastructure grow in this country," he said.
