EU approves smallpox vax Imanvex for monkeypox

COPENHAGEN: The European Commission has approved a smallpox vaccine for use against monkeypox, the Danish drugmaker that developed the jab said on Monday. "The Commission has extended the marketing authorisation for Imvanex to include protection from monkeypox" in line with a recommendation by EU's medicines watchdog, Bavarian Nordic said in a statement. "The approval... is valid in all European Union Member States as well as in Iceland, Liechtenstein and Norway."
