NMDC kicks off index-based iron ore pricing 'on a trial basis'

ENHANCING TRANSPARENCY. Experiment, which began in April, aims at better market-linked price discovery

Abhishek Law
New Delhi

India has started experimenting with index-based iron ore pricing mechanism — on global lines like the London Metal Exchange or Platts.

The experiment aimed at better market-linked price discovery — and easier royalty calculations — is a bold move which the State-run miner NMDC Ltd kicked off from April.

The move, if successful, could open up export opportunities because of it being a more transparent price discovery mechanism.

In a review meeting of the Steel Ministry held earlier this month, NMDC said it started index-based iron ore pricing "on a trial basis," as per documents presented to the Ministry, and seen by businessline.

"This transition to index-based pricing aligns our market offerings more closely with international benchmarks and enhances transparency for our stakeholders," it was said during the performance briefing.

The newly-adopted pricing mechanism ties NMDC's rates to the global Platts IODEX index, adjusted for currency fluctuations and weighted against recent domestic auction prices.

The method gives a 70 per cent weight to the Platts-based price, 20 per cent to NMDC's own e-auction outcomes and 10 per cent to State-run Odisha Mining Corporation's auction prices, reflecting an industry-wide price discovery approach.

All prices will be converted to US dollar using the day's exchange rate.

The trial of index-based pricing marks a strategic pivot for NMDC, which has long faced criticism for opaque, ad hoc pricing practices. It has been following an average selling price method (12 month average) as the general practice.

Analysts suggest that if the trial succeeds, it could standardise price discovery

CAPEX PLAN. Nearly ₹12,000 crore worth of expansion projects are underway and expected to be completed over the next three years across India's fragmented iron ore market and bring NMDC's rates closer to global export parity — a move that could both improve profitability and aid steel makers looking for more predictable input costs.

PRODUCTION

The shift comes on the back of NMDC clocking its highest-ever April production and sales beginning this fiscal, signalling strong operational momentum and a drive towards international pricing parity. According to the company's documents, NMDC recorded a 15 per cent year-on-year increase in production for April of fiscal year 2025-26, marking the most productive April in its history. Sales for the same month rose 3 per cent from the previous year, following an earlier record-breaking fourth quarter where the company posted its highest quarterly sales to date.

CAPEX PLANS

On the capital expenditure front, NMDC highlighted adjustments to its ongoing land lease acquisition for RINL, with a finalised 30-year lease reducing related expenses by ₹171 crore.

The company's budgeted capital outlay for FY26 stands at ₹3,517 crore.

Nearly ₹12,000 crore of expansion projects are already underway and are expected to be completed over the next three years, the review document says. Till April, nearly ₹4,800 crore of the expansion projects have materialised, while another ₹2,000 crore are expected to be invested during the fiscal.

Development of the Tokius coal block is expected to be completed by November (nearly 5 years post allotment) at a projected cost of ₹574 crore (of which ₹333 crore has already been invested) while for the Rohme coal block, the tentative development is expected to be completed sometime later this year. Allotment of the coal block happened in June 2021, and the projected investment is around ₹2,700 crore.

Govt restores export benefits under RoDTEP scheme for SEZs, EOUs

Press Trust of India
New Delhi

The government on Monday said benefits under the RoDTEP scheme for exports of goods manufactured in special economic zones (SEZs) and export-oriented units (EOUs) will be restored from June 1 this year.

Under the Remission of Duties and Taxes on Exported Products (RoDTEP), various Central and State duties, taxes and levies imposed on input products, among others, are refunded to exporters. The current RoDTEP rates are in the range of 0.3-4.3 per cent.

"The support under the RoDTEP scheme for exports of products made from AAs (advance authorisations), SEZs and EOUs is restored with effect from June 1," the Directorate General of Foreign Trade (DGFT) said in a notification. Welcoming the decision, the Federation of Indian Export Organisations (FIEO) said this positive step will go a long way in improving the global competitiveness of Indian exporters operating under these key export promotion schemes.

VITAL SUPPORT

FIEO President SC Ralhan said the industry has been seeking parity in RoDTEP coverage for all export segments, particularly those contributing significantly to India's value-added exports.

"The extension of RoDTEP benefits to advance authorisation, EOU and SEZ units reflects the government's recognition of their critical role in India's export ecosystem," he said.

He added that this is vital support at a time when Indian exporters are navigating intense global competition and demand uncertainties.

"It will certainly help in pushing exports and improving India's share in global trade," he said, urging the government to consider making this restoration effective retrospectively from February 7, 2025, so that there is no gap in RoDTEP coverage.

As per the earlier notification, the existing RoDTEP benefits for these entities were applicable only up to February 6, 2025. "A seamless transition would ensure stability and predictability for exporters and avoid any disruption in trade planning or pricing," Ralhan said.

Synology targets enterprise growth and surveillance portfolio expansion

Taipei

We are trying to focus on further developing our four core solutions — file serving storage, backup, surveillance and productivity

JOANNE WENG,
Director of the International Business Department, Synology

Can you provide an overview of Synology?

Synology started as a Network Attached Storage (NAS brand), mainly targeting prosumer, and assembly customers. Throughout the years, we have expanded our product lines, not just on the hardware but also on the software solutions. We have solutions across different sectors — from SMEs to enterprises, further down to consumers.

How do you see the split between your consumer tech and enterprise offerings?

At the moment, the focus is more on the enterprise business segment. We are trying to focus on further developing four core solutions — file serving storage, backup, surveillance and productivity.

Given that Synology is primarily known for storage solutions, how did the company venture into the surveillance space?

The idea came from surveillance video footage requiring storage. Since that was the case, we also built our own software on top for people to use it directly instead of integration. It can be a hassle to put different solutions together as one. A one-stop vendor concept can be valuable for them. Thereon, we put out our own surveillance app on top of Synology NAS.

That part is still big for us to develop the software. But we also have hardware built for surveillance purposes — like the Network Video Recorder (NVR) solution, which comes with AI-powered features. We also put out our own surveillance cameras and, shortly, will have our own Power over Ethernet (PoE) switch to go with it.

That is building up the whole profile of the surveillance product line. We will release cloud version of surveillance because not every user has the flexibility to build their on-prem infrastructure. Bringing in the cloud solution gives flexibility and options for customers to choose from. Surveillance will be a key place to continue expanding.

We want to increase our visibility in the solution area. When looking at surveillance in the software sector, many may think of the traditional big brands and see us only as a storage or a backup for the NVR solution at this stage. But we continue to promote that part.

When it comes to your enterprise offerings, are data centre requirements a key part of your focus?

At the moment, we are not focusing much on data centre building, but more on end-customer building — the corporate side of things. Many corporates require their service to be built in-house and this is where we can assist them. Data assets are everybody's key value nowadays.

A core part of Synology is storage, so file serving is a big part. Other than storing the data, protection is a priority. With increasing recently, planning your backup strategy is important. This is why we continue to improve ourselves on backup solutions to make sure we are ready for our customers.

What are some of your major global markets, and how does India compare?

The largest market is the US, with Germany being another big player. In Asia-Pacific, for example, India, is fast-moving. Things have been picking up in recent years. Many manufacturers are investing further in the Indian market.

Those are some opportunities for technology to assist them in building their local infrastructure. For the Indian market, we are still in an early stage of business development and do not have a local presence yet. We work with our channel partners to ensure they are up-to-date on all our solutions so that they can present them to our customers. We will continue to recruit and work closely with the channel partner. From the vendor side, we will continue investing on behalf of ourselves, too.
